

WILD BLACKBERRY

Blackberry is composed of the assembly of small black or purple bays.

With maturity the bays are detached easily from the conical receptacle, like raspberries.

WILD BLACKBERRY LIQUEUR

Silver Sigille - Concours International des Eaux de Vies et Liqueurs - Metz 2006

The brambles of the blackberry bush give small fruit with a black colour at maturity, very rich in sugar and with a soft and agreeable flavour. With its dark purply red colour, blackberry jam nose and its supple, generous palate, Trénel's Crème de Mûre Sauvage exactly reproduces the aromas and flavours of the wild blackberries of our childhood.
